

THE Second part of Henry

the fourth, containing the death and coronation of Henry

With the humorous of John

And the humorous of John

And the humorous of John

And the humorous of John

And the humorous of John

The second part of Henry continuing to his death nation of Henry fift.

Enter Rumour painted

Pen your eares; for w
The vent of hearing,
I from the Orient to t
(Making the wind m
The acts commenced

Vpon my tongues continuall stand
The which in euery language I pro
Stuffing the eares of men with false
I speake of peace while couert enm
Vnder the smile of safety, woundes
And who but Rumor, who but one
Make fearefull musters, and prepar Whiles the bigge yeare, swolne with
Is thought with child by the sterne
And no such matter. Rumour is a p
Blowne by surmizes, Iealousies con
And of so easie, and so plaine a stop
That the blunt monster, with vncou
The still discordant wau'ring mult
Can play vpon it. But what need I
(My wel knowne body) to anothor
Among my houshold? why is Run
A